

Iscavo Avocados USA, L.L.C. v. Pryor, 953 F.3d 316 (2020)

953 F.3d 316

United States Court of Appeals, Fifth Circuit.

ISCAVO AVOCADOS USA, L.L.C., Plaintiff - Appellee

v.

Adrian PRYOR, Defendant - Appellant

v.

Villita Avocado, Incorporated, Intervenor - Appellee

No. 19-40253

|

FILED March 12, 2020

Synopsis

Background: Seller of agricultural commodities brought action in state court against distributor of agricultural commodities and its partial owner, alleging that distributor and owner violated the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act's (PACA) trust provision by failing to pay for avocados that seller sold and delivered to distributor. After owner removed the action, another seller, who separately sold and delivered avocados to distributor, intervened, asserting its own PACA claim based on distributor's failure to pay. The United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas, Randy Crane, J., granted summary judgment in favor of sellers and awarded them both attorneys' fees. Owner appealed.

Holdings: The Court of Appeals, Jones, Circuit Judge, held that:

[1] owner could be held personally liable for distributor's violation of PACA's trust provision, and

[2] as matter of first impression, owner was personally liable under PACA's trust provision for attorneys' fees incurred by seller in seeking to collect on unpaid sales invoice.

Affirmed in part, vacated in part, and remanded.

Procedural Posture(s): On Appeal; Motion for Summary Judgment.

West Headnotes (7)

[1] Federal Courts ↗ Summary judgment

The Court of Appeals reviews the granting of a motion for summary judgment de novo, applying the same standard as the district court. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(a\).

[2] Factors ↗ Protection, Under Factors' Acts, of Persons Dealing with Factor

Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act (PACA) liability attaches first to the licensed commission merchant, dealer, or broker of perishable agricultural commodities; if, however, the assets of the licensed commission merchant, dealer, or broker are insufficient to satisfy the PACA liability, then others may be held secondarily liable. Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930 § 5, 7 U.S.C.A. § 499e\(c\)\(2\).

4 Cases that cite this headnote

[3] Factors ↗ Protection, Under Factors' Acts, of Persons Dealing with Factor

Individual shareholders, officers, or directors of a corporation who are in a position to control trust assets held for the benefit of unpaid sellers, and who breach their fiduciary duty to preserve those assets, may be held personally liable under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act (PACA). Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930 § 5, 7 U.S.C.A. § 499e\(c\)\(2\).

5 Cases that cite this headnote

[4] Factors ↗ Protection, Under Factors' Acts, of Persons Dealing with Factor

Partial owner of agricultural commodities distributor could be held personally liable for distributor's violation of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act's (PACA) trust provision, requiring trust assets to be held for the benefit of unpaid sellers until receipt of full payment of sums owing, for failing to pay for avocados that agricultural commodities seller sold and delivered to distributor, although owner was not involved in the day-to-day financial or business operations of the business, where owner was officer of distributor, was listed as distributor's principal on its PACA license, and had access to distributor's assets, including its bank account. Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930 § 5, 7 U.S.C.A. § 499e\(c\)\(2\).

Iscavo Avocados USA, L.L.C. v. Pryor, 953 F.3d 316 (2020)

6 Cases that cite this headnote

[5] Federal Courts Costs and attorney fees

The standard of review for an award of attorneys' fees is whether the trial court abused its discretion in making the award.

4 Cases that cite this headnote

[6] Factors Protection, Under Factors' Acts, of Persons Dealing with Factor

Phrase "sums owing in connection with" in Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act's (PACA) trust provision, requiring trust assets to be held for the benefit of unpaid sellers until receipt of full payment of sums owing in connection with such transactions, encompassed award of attorneys' fees related to collection efforts when such fees were included in sales contract between PACA buyer and seller; phrase was broad, phrase encompassed not just contract price for delivered commodities but also sums that buyer owed in connection with transaction, and attorneys' fees incurred by seller in seeking to collect on unpaid invoice were necessarily incurred in connection with the transaction. Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930 § 5, 7 U.S.C.A. § 499e\(c\)\(2\).

4 Cases that cite this headnote

[7] Factors Protection, Under Factors' Acts, of Persons Dealing with Factor

Partial owner of agricultural commodities distributor was personally liable under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act's (PACA) trust provision, requiring trust assets to be held for the benefit of unpaid sellers until receipt of full payment of sums owing, for attorneys' fees incurred by agricultural commodities seller in seeking to collect on unpaid sales invoice for avocados that seller sold and delivered to distributor, where sales invoice stated that buyer agreed to pay all costs of collection, including attorneys' fees, and owner failed to exercise control over distributor's PACA assets to preserve them for seller as trust beneficiary. Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930 § 5, 7 U.S.C.A. § 499e\(c\)\(2\).

7 Cases that cite this headnote

*317 Appeal from the United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas, Randy Crane, U.S. District Judge

Attorneys and Law Firms

Bruce W. Akerly, Carey Renee McNair, Attorney, Akerly Law, P.L.L.C., Coppell, TX, for Defendant-Appellant.

Craig Alan Stokes, David Lesly Jones, Esq., Stokes Law Office, L.L.P., San Antonio, TX, for Intervenor-Appellee.

Before KING, JONES, and COSTA, Circuit Judges.

Opinion

EDITH H. JONES, Circuit Judge:

Appellees Iscavo Avocados USA, LLC ("Iscavo") and Villita Avocados, Inc. ("Villita") sued appellant Adrian Pryor and his now-defunct produce distribution company, Coram Deo Farms, Inc. ("Coram Deo"), for violations of the Perishable Agricultural *318 Commodities Act ("PACA"). The district court granted summary judgment in favor of Iscavo and Villita and awarded them both attorneys' fees. Pryor appeals.

Iscavo Avocados USA, L.L.C. v. Pryor, 953 F.3d 316 (2020)

---

We affirm the summary judgment and the award of attorneys' fees to Villita, but we vacate and remand the award of attorneys' fees to Iscavo.

"The short lifespan of produce makes it risky business." In re Delta Produce, L.P., 845 F.3d 609, 612 (5th Cir. 2016). That risk is perhaps most acute for sellers of produce, who "must entrust their products to a buyer who may be thousands of miles away, and depend for their payment on his business acumen and fair dealing." Golman-Hayden Co. v. Fresh Source Produce Inc., 217 F.3d 348, 351 (5th Cir. 2000). Congress enacted PACA to protect sellers by "regulat[ing] perishable agricultural commodities industries and promot[ing] fair dealings in transactions with regard to fresh fruit and vegetables." Wayne Cusimano, Inc. v. Block, 692 F.2d 1025, 1026 (5th Cir. 1982). PACA's "trust provision" achieves this goal by requiring buyers of produce "to hold either the produce or all proceeds or accounts receivable from a subsequent sale of the produce in trust for the benefit of unpaid suppliers until 'full payment of the sums owing in connection with such transactions has been received by' the supplier." Delta Produce, 845 F.3d at 612–13 (quoting 7 U.S.C. § 499e(c)(2)).

Iscavo and Villita brought this lawsuit to enforce PACA's trust provision. The facts are simple and largely undisputed. Iscavo and Villita sell agricultural commodities. Coram Deo was a PACA-licensed distributor and dealer of agricultural commodities, partly owned by Pryor. In 2017, Iscavo and Villita each separately sold and delivered over $70,000 worth of avocados to Coram Deo. According to Pryor, sometime thereafter, his sole business partner absconded with most of Coram Deo's liquid assets. Iscavo and Villita were never paid, and, in March 2018, Coram Deo was dissolved.

In 2018, Iscavo sued Coram Deo and Pryor in state court, alleging they had violated PACA's trust provision by failing to pay for the produce. After Pryor removed the suit to federal court, Villita intervened, asserting its own PACA claim based on Coram Deo's failure to pay. The parties cross-moved for summary judgment. The district court denied Pryor's motion and granted Iscavo's and Villita's motions, finding that Pryor was personally liable under PACA for the amounts Coram Deo owed for the avocados plus interest. The district court also awarded Iscavo and Villita attorneys' fees. Pryor appeals the summary judgment and award of attorneys' fees.

[1] We turn first to the summary judgment. We review the granting of a motion for summary judgment de novo, applying the same standard as the district court. Tango Transp. v. Healthcare Fin. Servs. LLC, 322 F.3d 888, 890 (5th Cir. 2003). Summary judgment is appropriate if no genuine dispute of material fact exists, and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. FED. R. CIV. P. 56(a).

The district court held that Pryor was individually liable under PACA because he "was in a position to control the PACA trust assets at issue and breached his fiduciary duty to preserve them." Pryor does not dispute the applicability of PACA; nor does Pryor dispute that Iscavo and Villita each sold Coram Deo avocados, and Coram Deo failed to remit payment. Pryor argues only that the district court erred in holding him personally liable.

[2] [3] "PACA liability attaches first to the licensed commission merchant, dealer, or broker of perishable agricultural commodities." *319 Golman-Hayden, 217 F.3d at 351. "If, however, the assets of the licensed commission merchant, dealer, or broker are insufficient to satisfy the PACA liability, then others may be held secondarily liable ...." Id. Specifically, "individual shareholders, officers, or directors of a corporation who are in a position to control trust assets, and who breach their fiduciary duty to preserve those assets, may be held personally liable under PACA." Id.

[4] Pryor was an officer and 80% owner of Coram Deo, he was listed as its principal on its PACA license, and he had access to Coram Deo's assets, including its bank account. It is undisputed that, in this role, Pryor had the ability to control Coram Deo's assets but failed to do so. The district court did not therefore err in holding Pryor personally liable. See id. (holding a shareholder personally liable because "he manifestly had absolute control of the corporation" but "refus[ed] or fail[ed] to exercise any appreciable oversight of the corporation's management").

Pryor nevertheless argues he should not be held liable because his partner handled everything; Pryor "was not involved in the day-to-day financial or business operations of the business." But actual involvement is not the standard. Indeed, Pryor is individually liable precisely because he refused to be involved in Coram Deo. Pryor had the authority to ensure Coram Deo's trust assets were preserved for the beneficiaries of the PACA trust, but he refused to exercise that authority. See Ruby Robinson Co. v. Herr, 453 F. App'x 463, 465 (5th Cir. 2011) (“It is established that a shareholder may not avoid liability under PACA merely by failing to assume responsibilities that he is entitled to.” (citing Golman-Hayden, 217 F.3d at 351)). Summary judgment was therefore proper.

Iscavo Avocados USA, L.L.C. v. Pryor, 953 F.3d 316 (2020)

---

[5] Now to fees. “[T]he standard of review for an award of attorneys’ fees is whether the trial court abused its discretion in making the award.” DP Sols., Inc. v. Rollins, Inc., 353 F.3d 421, 433 (5th Cir. 2003). The district court awarded Iscavo and Villita attorneys’ fees pursuant to PACA’s trust provision. Pryor argues PACA does not authorize an award of attorneys’ fees.

[6] PACA does not expressly require an award of attorneys’ fees. The PACA trust provision, however, states that PACA trust assets must be held for the benefit of all unpaid sellers “until full payment of the sums owing in connection with such transactions has been received” by the sellers. 7 U.S.C. § 499e(c)(2) (emphasis added). We have never addressed whether this provision supports an award of attorneys’ fees to a PACA beneficiary. But several of our sister circuits have interpreted the phrase “sums owing in connection with” as allowing an award of attorneys’ fees related to collection efforts when such fees are included in the sales contract between the PACA buyer and seller. See Coosemans Specialties, Inc. v. Gargiulo, 485 F.3d 701, 709 (2d Cir. 2007); Pac. Int’l Mktg., Inc. v. A & B Produce, Inc., 462 F.3d 279, 285–86 (3d Cir. 2006); Middle Mountain Land & Produce Inc. v. Sound Commodities Inc., 307 F.3d 1220, 1222–23 (9th Cir. 2002); Country Best v. Christopher Ranch, LLC, 361 F.3d 629, 632–33 (11th Cir. 2004).

We agree with that interpretation. The phrase “sums owing in connection with” is broad. It unambiguously encompasses not just the contract price for the delivered agricultural commodities but also all sums the buyer owes in connection with that transaction. Attorneys’ fees a seller incurs in seeking to collect on an unpaid invoice are necessarily incurred in connection with the transaction memorialized by the invoice. And when the seller agrees to pay *320 those fees in the same invoice, the fees are “owed in connection with” the transaction.

[7] Villita’s sales invoice—which no one disputes is an enforceable agreement between Villita and Coram Deo—states that “Buyer also agrees to pay all costs of collection, including attorneys’ fees.” Under the PACA trust provision, Coram Deo was thus required to maintain trust assets sufficient to cover Villita’s attorneys’ fees incurred in its collection efforts. And because Pryor failed to exercise control over Coram Deo’s PACA assets to preserve them for Villita as a trust beneficiary, Pryor is personally liable for Villita’s attorneys’ fees. The district court did not therefore abuse its discretion in awarding Villita attorneys’ fees.

It is unclear from the record, however, whether Iscavo’s invoice required Coram Deo to pay attorneys’ fees incurred in Iscavo’s collection efforts, and the district court gave no explanation for its award to Iscavo. Thus, we cannot determine whether the district court abused its discretion in awarding Iscavo attorneys’ fees. See Falcon Constr. Co. v. Econ. Forms Corp., 805 F.2d 1229, 1235 (5th Cir. 1986) (“Appellate courts are left with no basis to determine whether the trial court has abused its discretion if that court gives no explanation for the award it makes.”).

For the foregoing reasons, the district court’s summary judgment is AFFIRMED, the award of attorneys’ fees to Villita is AFFIRMED, and the award of attorneys’ fees to Iscavo is VACATED and REMANDED to the district court with instructions to explain the basis for its award. Any further appeal will be to this panel.

All Citations

953 F.3d 316